Termination/Cancellation of a Program

Program Termination/Cancellation Grounds

Danville Regional Medical Center School of Health Professions (“School”) reserves the right to cancel or terminate a program for any reason. Examples of reasons for termination include but are not limited to:

- Lack of demand in the community workforce for graduates of a program
- The School’s inability to secure needed resources (i.e. clinical facilities; faculty)
- Insufficient financial resources
- Insufficient enrollment

Program Termination/Cancellation Procedure:

In accordance with applicable law and accrediting agency requirements, the School will prepare and implement a plan to address matters related to program termination/cancellation. With respect to currently enrolled students, the plan may include offering courses needed to complete the program of study and/or assisting with the transfer of students to other programs (e.g., teach-out agreement) as required by applicable law or accrediting agency requirements.
